INTRODUCTION:

The changing industrial scenario and the consequent competitive environment are pushing management to review their strategies, structures and styles. To survive and subsequently grow in any industry, attaining leadership is vital, and for this, organisations have to focus primarily on three factors : Quality, Cost and Time. Effective Supervision is absolutely critical in this context. Supervisors are required to have an exclusive insight and acquire new skills to give immediate business results.

Everybody likes to be in a winning team. In an organisation, each department is a team that can win only if it reaches predetermined goals. It is the responsibility of a supervisor to help establish such goals and then motivate his people to reach them. When an individual becomes a supervisor, communication of all types, at all levels, takes on new importance.

This workshop is designed to motivate participants to experience and understand their potential capacity to become better supervisors as well as team leaders. It clearly identifies the various methods and circumstances in which supervisors can make a contribution to their organisation's performance and to understand and practice the advanced skills necessary for more senior positions.
